See the list of Endorsed Service Providers on page 7 for contact information.

Also in attendance were two of our TMTA Insurance Agency representatives from the Ralph C. Wilson Agency: Jay Poplawski (Property Casualty and Workers' Comp.) and Dennis Campbell (Health and Benefits) to answer questions and field inquiries.

COBRA Subsidy Extension Given

President Obama signed the “Continuing Extension Act of 2010” into law on April 15, 2010, which, among other things, provides a further extension of eligibility for the COBRA subsidy enacted last year as part of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (ARRA). The COBRA subsidy is now available for involuntary terminations through May 31, 2010.

Eligible individuals pay only 35 percent of their COBRA premiums and the remaining 65 percent is reimbursed to the employer through a tax credit. To qualify, individuals must experience a COBRA qualifying event that is the involuntary termination of a covered employee’s employment. The involuntary termination must generally occur during the period that began September 1, 2008 and ends on May 31, 2010. (An involuntary termination of employment that occurs on or after March 2, 2010 but by May 31, 2010 and follows a qualifying event that was a reduction of hours that occurred at any time from September 1, 2008 through May 31, 2010 is also a qualifying event for purposes of ARRA.) The premium reduction applies to periods of health coverage that began on or after February 17, 2009 and lasts for up to 15 months.

Because the last COBRA subsidy extension already expired, individuals who experienced an involuntary termination since March 31, 2010 and have already received a COBRA election notice will need to receive an updated notice explaining their rights under the extension. These individuals are entitled to a special election period, even if they previously declined COBRA coverage. The updated notices must be sent by June 15, 2010.

Michigan Workplace Smoking Ban

After 10 years of legislative debate, last December Michigan banned smoking in any enclosed indoor area where at least one employee works with the exception of casinos, cigar bars, tobacco stores, home offices and vehicles.

Effective May 1, 2010, the law affects all Michigan public and private employers. This includes public meetings, government agencies and even patios of restaurants. Dedicated indoor smoking rooms are prohibited. Cigar bars and tobacco specialty retail stores must file paperwork yearly and be approved in order to allow smoking. Generally, casinos established before May 1, 2010 can allow smoking in the gambling area only.

There is no obligation for employers to adopt a written policy of no smoking, but employers should consider policies that explain the smoking ban and the penalties that may be imposed on violators and provide notice to employees that those in violation of the smoking ban will be subject to disciplinary actions up to and including discharge.

Employers don't have to report smoking violations to the police, but they are responsible for making reasonable efforts to prohibit smoking in the workplace. They must clearly post no smoking signs or the internationally recognized no smoking symbol at the entrances to and throughout any building or work area; remove all ashtrays or other smoking paraphernalia from work areas; inform employees, vendors, customers and visitors that smoking is prohibited by law and subject to penalties; and ask any employee or individual smoking in violation of the law to stop and further request that they leave the work area if they refuse.

There are no direct penalties authorized against the employer at this point providing they have met the obligations stated above. Community and local health departments are authorized to seek enforcement and they can pursue relief within 60 days. Individuals who smoking in violation of the law are subject to a $100 fine for the first offense and up to a $500 fine for subsequent violations.

To read a copy of the law, visit our website at www.thetmta.com.

Nursing Mother Break Amendment to FLSA

The 2010 Health Care Reform Act amended the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) by requiring that employers provide a reasonable break time for an employee to express breast milk for her nursing child for 1 year after the child's birth each time the employee has need to express milk.

The Act states that employers must now provide a place, other than a bathroom, that is shielded from view and free from intrusion from coworkers and the public, which may be used by an employee to express breast milk.

The requirements do not apply to employers with less than 50 employees if such requirements would impose an undue hardship by causing the employer significant difficulty or expense when considered in relation to the size, financial resources, nature, or structure of the employer's business.

The amendment does not set a limit on the number of breaks that nursing mothers are permitted to take, nor does it specify a limit on the length of each break. Contrary to general FLSA requirements that employees be paid for breaks of less than 20 minutes, the new amendment says the breaks for mothers can be unpaid. Individual state laws may require paid breaks. Under the Michigan Minimum Wage Act, the State Wage/Hour Division takes the position that breaks of less than 15 minutes must be counted as working time and must be paid. While the Michigan Minimum Wage law generally does not apply to employers who are covered by the FLSA, it does apply if the minimum wage under the FLSA would be less than under state law. The Michigan Wage/Hour Department has not issued a formal position, so there could be claims for unpaid minimum wages under the Michigan law if employers do not pay nursing mothers for short breaks to express breast milk.

The amendment does not specify an effective date, so the safest course of action is to assume that the requirements take effect immediately.

What's Behind That Great Renewal Premium?

by: David B. Palmeri,
Vice President, Ralph C. Wilson Agency

So you just got a competitive renewal quotation from an agent you hardly know, little less trust. He's saving you 30% from your current program and that's expense dollars straight off the top. In this current economy it's very difficult not to take the quote seriously! What's really behind that too-good-to-be-true program?

Many factors attribute to premium development and why we see wide swings in premium assessment from company to company for what appears to be the same coverage. If we begin to understand the economic and actuarial logic an insurance company faces when they approach new business, we should be able to comprehend the variance in pricing that can happen on any given renewal quote.

Some key components one should review include:

- Verify that exposure bases are similar;
- Understand the difference between aggressive pricing and conservative underwriting; and
- Verify the financial strength of the insurance carrier.

Premium development for every coverage written is constructed by a rate multiplied by an exposure base. In property the exposure base is property values. In workers compensation it is payroll. When reviewing competing quotes you need to be absolutely certain that both quotes are using similar exposure bases and what the final rates are.

Approximately 27 cents of each premium dollar is expensed to cover administrative costs on any given policy. With a 73% profit margin it is not hard to recognize that an aggressive sales department can gamble on credits believing they can get a little lucky and gain market share at the same time. Loss history should factor into the equation and, if logic dictates that it hasn't, then you may be looking at a short-term relationship.

Lastly, selecting an insurance carrier that is financially secure is just as important. The ability for an insurance company to meet its claim obligations, services they provide, and financial condition of their balance sheet should be critical in your decision making process. Fortunately, there are a number of independent rating companies that make these financial evaluations for you in this instance.

The four most prominent rating companies are A.M. Best Company, Fitch Ratings, Standard & Poor's and Moodys Investors Service. Each of these services uses slightly different criteria when rating insurance companies which means they may have a slightly different view of a given carrier. A.M. Best ratings are based on financial condition and performance and are usually the gold standard for the insurance industry. Fitch, Standard & Poor's and Moodys ratings are based on claims paying ability. In addition, there are usually short and long term implications issued by each rating service.

Your agent should provide at least two of these rating services with your quote. He should be able to explain the difference in each one and explain why it is important. You have made it through the most difficult economic downturn since the Great Depression, now make sure the financial strength of your insurance company is at your side when you need them most.

Below are the websites of the rating services for your review:

- A.M. Best Company: 908-439-2200, www.ambest.com;
- Fitch Ratings: 800-893-4824, www.fitchratings.com;
- Standard & Poor's: 212-438-2400, www.standardandpoors.com; and
- Moodys Investors Service: 212-553-0377, www.moodys.com.

Are regular eye exams important?

Yes! In addition to ensuring you see your best, here are some conditions regularly detected during a routine eye exam:

High Blood Pressure

30% of patients are diagnosed during a routine eye exam

Cataracts

40% of individuals between 52 and 64 are affected.

Glaucoma

3 million Americans over age 40 are affected.

Diabetic Retinopathy

7 million are affected in the U.S.

Macular Degeneration

This is the leading cause of blindness for Americans over age 60.

Did you know? The working blood vessels of your own body can be directly viewed by your eye doctor during an eye exam. This allows early detection of diseases such as diabetes and high blood pressure. Because an eye exam is painless and shameless, more people see their optometrist annually than those who have annual physicals. As a result, it is not at all uncommon for patients to have these diseases detected during their eye exam, and often before they have any symptoms whatsoever. Early detection and treatment can prevent blindness and other serious health issues as well as save on medical claims.

Certainly this is a positive development and it is heartening to know that GE is actively engaged in the effort with our members as well. Better things to come!

Get your calendar out and save Thursday June 24th for the TMTA Annual Golf Outing. Once again, this year the Outing will be held at Fox Hills in Plymouth. Preparations are underway and we hope to have an early sell out. Details will be released soon and reservations will then be accepted.

This event is very well attended and has traditionally been the major membership event of the year.
